Award-winning writer-director working across narrative film and television, known for emotionally driven storytelling and a distinctive visual language.

With over six years of experience across development, production, and post-production, Salina has led a range of creative projects including narrative short films, television series, and feature film development. Her work is defined by poetic screenwriting, psychologically rich characters, and visually distinct cinematic worlds exploring longing, desire, hope, and disillusionment.

She collaborates with producers and creative teams to develop original scripted projects from concept through to production readiness, and is currently developing original television and feature film projects grounded in intimate, character-led storytelling.
